

Pieter Bottelier

Economist and China scholar. Sr. adjunct professor, Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) since 1999. Senior Advisor on China to The Conference Board since 2006. Visiting Scholar at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace since September 2009.

Adjunct Lecturer at Harvard University (KSG), 2001-03 and at Georgetown University, 2004.

Author of many articles and book chapters on China's economy.

World Bank career 1970-98: Senior Advisor to the Vice President for East Asia, 1997-98; Chief of the World Bank's Resident Mission in Beijing, 1993-97; consecutive directorships for Latin America and North Africa, 1987-93; Division Chief for Mexico, 1983-87; resident Chief Economist in Jakarta, Indonesia, 1979-83; various assignments as desk economist for East- and West African countries, 1970-79.

Employment prior to World Bank: Amsterdam University, 1964-65; advisor Ministry of Finance Zambia (Lusaka), 1965-67; consultant to UNCTAD (Geneva) on the global market for virgin and scrap non-ferrous metals, 1968; Chief Economist and Marketing Director of the (then) Zambian State-owned copper company (Lusaka), 1968-70.

Education: University of Amsterdam 1954-62. Drs degree (MA equivalent) 1962; MIT 1962-63 – guest scholar.

Harkness Fellow of the Commonwealth Fund in New York for study in the US, 1962-64.

Research associate at the Brookings Institution. Washington, DC 1963-64.

Updated September 2009